Assigned the task of carrying supplies to troops in a defensive position, he made several trips under heavy artillery fire up cliffs so precipitous that he was forced to crawl on his hands and knees, and to employ ropes to make the difficult ascents with his burdens. With great courage and grim determination, he accomplished his missions in the face of obstacles and dangers so great that other attempts had failed. After all supplies were carried to the top of the mountain, Private First Class Brown joined his comrades to take part in the forthcoming attack under a constant enemy artillery and mortar barrage. In spite of physical exhaustion, he then advanced with his unit until killed by enemy fire. Next of kin: Mrs. E. Brown (widow), Comanche, Texas.

and functions of regimental S-3 and executive officer in the preparations for and during the attack on a vital mountain on the road to Rome. In spite of the freezing temperatures and the constant threat of enemy artillery fire, he moved fearlessly across the rugged terrain, visiting front line companies. His presence greatly inspired and encouraged the men, and their awareness of Major Lorenzen's calm, fearlessness encouraged them to work with greater efficiency and tenacity. For nine grueling days he performed his double duties indefatigably, and his cool good judgment and splendid leadership contributed much to the success of the operation. Entered the Service from Stephenville, Texas.

JOHN A. STEEL, 0403009, Captain, 142nd Infantry Regiment, for gallantry in action from 23 January to 2 February 1944 in Italy. For five days Captain Steel performed the double duties of regimental adjutant and liaison officer between his regimental headquarters and a French unit. Tireless in accomplishing his missions, he made frequent trips over roads constantly exposed to enemy fire and under close observation. Although he spoke no French, Captain Steel diplomatically maintained contact between the French unit and his own headquarters, keeping each accurately informed of the other's actions and plans. Entered the Service from Fort Worth, Texas.

THOMAS J. STOCKARD, Second Lieutenant, 0120840, 1st Infantry Regiment, for gallantry in action on 22 December 1943, in Italy. As platoon commander of Company 3, Lieutenant Stockard was ordered to attack a hill occupied by a greatly superior enemy force. He personally led his platoon in the attack under continuous enemy artillery, mortar and small arms fire, with utter disregard for his own safety, advanced freely among his men, inspiring them to greater efforts. When his platoon was repulsed by the enemy, Lieutenant Stockard, although suffering from a severe head wound, effected an orderly withdrawal of his men to a place of defile while he remained under fire to supervise the evacuation of the wounded. In the course of the action, he obtained information concerning enemy strengths and positions which proved invaluable to Division and Corps in planning the final attack. Entered the Service from Lawrenceburg, Tennessee.

LEO D. ANDERSON, 0128446, Second Lieutenant, 1st Infantry Regiment, for gallantry in action on 21 December 1943, in Italy. As a member of the 1st Battalion, ordered to attack a hill held by the enemy, Lieutenant Anderson learned that the assault company of the battalion had been halted by the enemy and were counterattacked with it had been broken by shell fire. He volunteered to cover the route of the wire under enemy artillery, mortar and small arms fire until he located and repaired the break. Several times the line was severed and each time Lieutenant Anderson, with utter disregard for his own life, repaired the break under fire. By his gallant actions, wise counteraction, and tenacious attack, and materially contributed to the success of the operation. Entered the Service from Johnsbury, Vermont.

RALPH L. SMITH, 01001, Technical Fifth Grade, with 3d Company for gallantry in action on the night of 2 February 1944, in the vicinity of Rome, Italy. A technical division of repairing telephone circuits damaged by enemy action, the 3d Company patrolled the lines on foot, under a continual barrage of enemy artillery shells so intense that all other personnel nearby remained under cover until he was sent. DANIEL B. HARRISON, 13151846, Private, Headquarters Company, 36th Infantry Division, for gallantry in action on the night of 12 February 1944, at * * *, Italy. While sheltered from enemy artillery fire in a roadside shelter, he heard the cries of a man in pain on the roadway. With utter disregard for his own safety, Private Harrison left his shelter and ran to the location of the cries. He found a seriously wounded soldier lying on the road in imminent danger of being trampled by the bulls of a passing pack train. Diverting the bulls from their path, he then, under constant artillery fire, improvised a litter and assisted in carrying the victim to an aid station. His gallant action undoubtedly saved the latter's life. Entered the service from Detroit, Michigan.
